

Feeding The Hog.

As the amount of grain fed to brood sows must be small or they will get too fat, most farmers try to fill them up by making a thin slop.

Water is a poor filling material. Better use clover or alfalfa hay.

This gives the animal the sensation of fullness and comfort, and at the same time furnishes most valuable nutriment.

Mature hogs that are thin may be made to gain half a pound per day on alfalfa without grain.

It high time that the value of skim-milk and buttermilk as pig foods was fully appreciated. As an agency for rearing all young animals, they have no equal.

If there is any tendency to constipation, feed a little oil meal or ground flaxseed.—Farm Journal.
